MARKET COMMENTARY - APRIL 2026

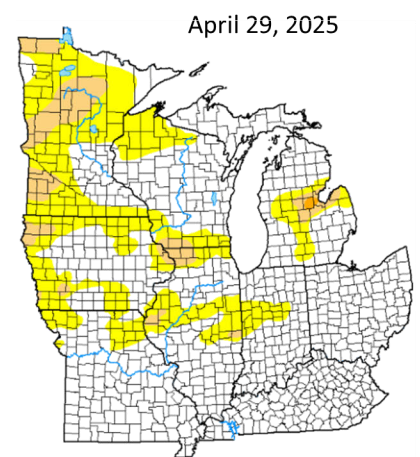

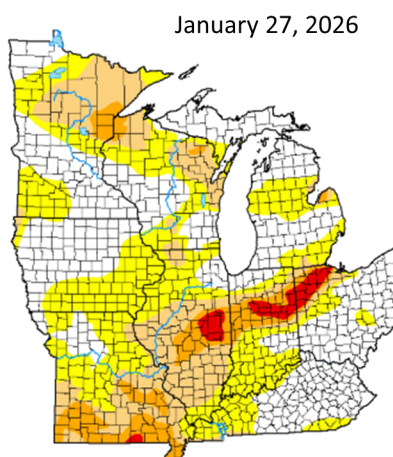

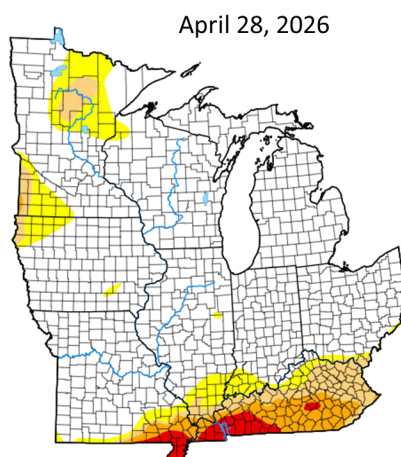

Greetings! Planting season is here. Not a lot has been planted due to rain. When conditions are right for planting, crops will go in fast. Keep safety first.

You can find insightful interviews with guests about anything that deals with farm real estate or affects land market conditions on my YouTube channel: www.youtube.com/@LANDTALKERTV. If the current drought map looks like this in July and August, we are going to have a big corn crop. I have been reading some weather forecasts for this summer and there is a potential for a “Super El Nino.” Iowa typically experiences cooler temps in July, August and September when El Nino is in effect. When there are “super” events, much of the state tends to see somewhat wetter to near-normal conditions in summer.

Acres Auctioned in Iowa
	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026

April is usually slow for auctions and that typically continues to August, slowly picking up with November being the most active month of the year. Auction volume is good. I think this shows optimism with sellers.

Land market conditions continue to be “steady.” Visiting with my farm realtor friends, a consistent message I am hearing is lack of inventory. Farm listings are getting sold quickly. Demand to buy land is strong and inventory is struggling to keep up. Be prepared for any “weather hiccups” during the 2026 growing season which could fire up grain markets. If this happens, we will see it in land prices this fall.
